

Thursday, May 25, 2006

A Busy Time

It's been a while since I last posted here. Not that I haven't thought about it, and maybe even had some good ideas. It's been a busy time. Preparing for Vacation Bible School, catching up on things that had to be neglected during Lent and shortly afterward, continuing to add to the long list of projects on our new old house, preparing for the synod convention in June, etc. Anyway, I started yesterday to collect some firewood for next winter. The first two pickup loads are here, piled up and needing some cutting and splitting. Several more loads are waiting where those came from.

So, though I'm sorry that I haven't posted much this month, I'm happy that things are moving along in several other ways. Look for another post or two today, hopefully more interesting than this one.

Posted by Jesse Jacobsen at 13:36